Matt Agosta
Steele Rubber Products
(Denver, NC)

Steele Rubber Products is known as “the best kept secret in Denver”. The company makes rubber automotive parts, primarily for antique, classic and special interest cars. Matt’s father in law, Lynn H. Steele, began the company in 1958 when he tried to rebuild a 1931 Cadillac and became frustrated when he could not find the rubber parts needed for the restoration. He began making a few parts for his personal use and then decided others may need these parts as well so he began to produce and sell them at car shows. In 1967 he began advertising in Hemming’s Motor News and the company has not missed advertising in the publication since that time — making them the oldest consecutive advertiser in the publication.

Today, Steele Rubber Products produces over 9,000 rubber parts and has a 600 page retail catalog with an additional 600 to 900 parts in their online catalog. They are experts in their industry and are often featured on SPEED Channel TV shows such as “My Classic Car”; included in industry magazines with articles written by Matt Agosta (President & CEO); and they have conducted interviews at SEMA shows and on ESPN.
